

86. For them who cling to pleasure and lordship, whose minds are captivated by such (speech), is not designed this (determinate) reason, on contemplation steadily bent—
(ii. 44.)

87. The knowers of the three (Vedas), the Soma-drinkers, the purified from sin, worshipping Me with sacrifice, pray of Me the way to Svarga; they, ascending to the holy > world of the God Indra, eat in heaven the divine feasts of the Gods.—(ix. 20.)

88. They, having enjoyed the spacious Svarga-world, their holiness withered, come back to this mortal world. Following the virtues enjoined by the three (Ṛedas) desiring desires, they obtain the transitory.—(ix. 21.)

89. The worlds, beginning with the world of Brahma, they come and go, O Arjuna; but he who cometh unto Me, O Kaunteya, he knoweth birth no more.—
(viii. 16.)
